The University of Georgia (www.uga.edu) is the first state-chartered university in America (1785). It is a comprehensive land grant university located in Athens, Georgia, 90 miles northeast of Atlanta. The University, with over 34,000 students and 2,900 faculty members, is one of the four major units of the University System of Georgia and offers programs of study at the doctoral level in most fields. Georgia is well known for its quality of life both outdoors and in urban activities (www.georgia.gov).

The Hugh Hodgson School of Music is home to 500 students and a faculty of 60. The Hodgson School is part of the Performing and Visual Arts Complex that includes the five-story music building, the Lamar Dodd School of Art, the Georgia Museum of Art, and the Performing Arts Center. Undergraduate programs include the Bachelor of Arts degree and the Bachelor of Music degree with majors in music composition, music education, music therapy, music theory, and music performance. Graduate offerings include the Master of Arts, Master of Music, Master of Music Education, Education Specialist, Doctor of Education, Doctor of Musical Arts and Doctor of Philosophy degrees, with majors in performance, conducting, music composition, music literature, musicology/ethnomusicology, and music education.

The Franklin College of Arts and Sciences, its many units, and the University of Georgia are committed to increasing the diversity of its faculty and students, and sustaining a work and learning environment that is inclusive. Women, minorities and people with disabilities are encouraged to apply. The University is an EEO/AA institution.
